

A Writer's Life

Across

5. A technique that enables readers to experience the story through action and senses rather than description. (3 words)

9. The location and time period where the story takes place is called its...

10. The front of a book is called the...

11. The first line of a novel is called the...

15. Writers are professionally called...

16. A literary device by which an author hints what is to come.

18. The reader's temporary acceptance of story elements as believable, regardless of how implausible they may seem in real life, is called suspension of...

20. The event or decision that begins a story's problem is called the... (2 words)

21. This can be external or internal, but it drives suspense and tension in fiction.

22. The main character of a story is called the...

Down

1. A novel ends with its...

2. First person and third person are examples of this.

3. The villain of a story is called the...

4. A character's perspective in a story. (3 words)

6. When a writer is stuck at a particular point in a story, it's called... (2 words)

7. The underlying message of a story is called its...

8. Some writers hire one of these to do the writing for them.

12. The average novel has about 250 to 300 of these on a page.

13. Books are sectioned off into...

14. The sequence of incidents or events in a story, also called the story line.

17. This is the turning point of a story, its point of highest tension.

19. If the written story is not true it's called a work of...

23. In literature, this is determined by the subject, setting or plot of the story. Some examples are fantasy, romance or suspense.