

Ch.13- Social Psychology

Across

1. compliance with an order or submission to another's authority.
5. a type of social influence involving a change in belief or behavior in order to fit in with a group
6. the study of how people influence others' behavior, beliefs, and attitudes.
7. the tendency of people to engage in atypical behavior when stripped of their usual identities
8. Groups sometimes become so intent on ensuring that everyone agrees with everyone else that they lose their capacity to evaluate issues objectively

9. a worsening of performance in the presence of others

10. we often look to others when a situation is ambiguous and we're not sure what to do, we copy their behavior.

Down

2. the mere presence of others can enhance our performance in certain situations
3. a contagious outbreak of irrational behavior that spreads
4. occurs when group discussion strengthens the dominant position held by individual group members