

Chapter 18- The Preschool Child

Across

- 3. Playing in loosely associated groups.
- 5. A distinctive characteristic of intuitive thinking.
- 7. Period, usually lasting 1 minute per year of age, that is considered an effective discipline technique
- 9. Used for children under stress by providing a well-equipped playroom.
- 10. The idea that people created the world and everything in it.

11. A tendency to attribute life to inanimate objects.

12. Toys and play that can be a therapeutic value in retraining muscles, improving eye-hand coordination, and helping children crawl and walk,

13. Useful in communicating with children and adults using clay, paint, and other media.

Down

1. Seen in the play of children who pretend that an empty box is a fort

2. A good example that significantly influence children's education.

4. A type of thinking in which children have difficulty seeing any point of view other than their own.

6. Involuntary urination after the age at which bladder control should have been established.

8. Playing independently within a group.