

Chapter 9: Principles of Interpersonal Communication

Across

2. is communication between two people in which the messages exchanged significantly impact thoughts, emotions, behaviors, and relationships of the people involved.

7. involving two pairs of people

8. an intense form of liking defined by emotional investment and the close inter-twinning of two people's lives

9. when it is clear that person has an interest in you

10. a state of intense emotional and physical longing for union with another.

13. a public ritual that announces to the world that you and your romantic partner have made a commitment to each other.

14. an interpersonal communication approach in which you consider an individual with an open mind, giving the person the same attention and respect you expect for yourself

15. when a person is naturally drawn to beauty and good looks

17. a feeling of affection and respect that we often have for our friends, extended family members, and coworkers

18. a network of people who share their lives over long periods of time and are bound by marriage, blood, or commitment.

19. affiliations you have with professional peers, supervisors, subordinates, or mentors.

20. the phenomenon that you're more likely to pursue relationships with people with whom you have frequent contact, whether face-to-face or online

Down

1. the emotional, mental, and physical involvements that you forge with others through communication

3. exchanges that have a negligible perceived impact on your thoughts, emotions, behaviors, and relationships

4. interpersonal involvements in which the participants perceive the bond as romantic.

5. people seek romantic partnerships, close family involvements, friendships, and coworker relationships with those whom they see as similar to themselves.

6. you'll feel drawn to individuals who offer you substantial benefits with few costs

11. a stage where you size up a new person to decide whether you want to get to know that person better.

12. a more intense emotional connection, consisting of intimacy, caring, and attachment.

16. voluntary interpersonal relationships characterized by intimacy and liking.