

China's one child policy and the affects on their population

Across

3. The term used to define the number of babies born every year per 1000 people in a population.

7. When was the one child policy implemented?

9. the term used to define the number of deaths every year per 1000 people in a population.

11. This became very common after the one child policy was implemented.

12. Another way of measuring population

13. The nickname for Chinese orphanages

14. The result of baby boys in China being of such high demand

Down

1. An exception that enabled you to have a second child

2. A way of measuring population

4. This would happen immediately if you were found to be pregnant with your second child, without permission

5. This was one of the punishments if you were caught pregnant with your second child

6. People who would spy to see if women were pregnant with illegal children.

8. Family would not receive this if you had illegally had your second child.

10. Family would not receive this either if you were caught with your second child