

Name: _____

Date: _____

Criminal Defences

Across

2. When the accused person's mental development is not complete.
3. The accused uses this explanation when they have reasonable evidence that they have been set up by the police.
7. A very rare situation in which the victim claims they agreed to what the accused did.
9. The defence in which a person claimed they had no control over their body or movements.
10. This one is not a proper defence, but can be used to explain the accused's motives.

Down

1. The accused believes that their actions are not criminal by virtue of the circumstance.
4. When in emergency situations, an ordinary person defended themselves or their property.
5. When the accused claims they were threatened immediate harm if they didn't do what they did.
6. When an ordinary person is compelled to break the law in an emergency situation.
8. This defence is used when the accused claims to have a disease of the mind.