

Developmental Psych

Across

3. The branch of psych that studies physical, cognitive, and social change throughout the life span.

6. The "Who am I"

9. Piaget's theory; the stage where children gain the mental operations to think logically about concrete events.

10. Piaget's theory; stage where infants know the world mostly by in terms of their sensory impressions and motor activities

12. A woman's first menstrual period

13. The perception of how a person sees themselves no matter it may or may not correspond with their birth sex

Down

1. The study where people of different ages are compared with each other

2. Accumulated knowledge and verbal skills, tends to increase with age

4. Ideas of yours and others: feelings, perceptions, thoughts, behaviors

5. The process where specific animals form attachments during an important period in their early stages of life.

7. The expected behavior that corresponds with your birth sex.

8. The sense of you and I

11. Piaget theory, the difficulty of a child to take another's point of view.