

Food and Nutrition

Across

4. any nutritious substance that people or animals eat or drink, or that plants absorb, in order to maintain life and growth.

8. the process by which bacteria or other microorganisms are unintentionally transferred from one substance or object to another, with harmful effect.

9. a minute, typically one-celled, reproductive unit capable of giving rise to a new individual without sexual fusion, characteristic of lower plants, fungi, and protozoans.

11. the process or fact of irradiating or being irradiated.

Down

1. terrorism involving the release of toxic biological agents.

2. a microscopic organism, especially a bacterium, virus, or fungus

3. the ability or willingness to tolerate something, in particular the existence of opinions or behavior that one does not necessarily agree with.

5. bring (a fact, event, or situation) back into one's mind, especially so as to recount it to others; remember.

6. an antigenic poison or venom of plant or animal origin, especially one produced by or derived from microorganisms and causing disease when present at low concentration in the body.

7. conditions relating to public health, especially the provision of clean drinking water and adequate sewage disposal.

10. a danger or risk.