

Name: _____

Grade 10: From Fibers to Clothing

Across

4. The process used to create distressed jeans.
5. This property of the bamboo fibre makes it a popular fibre to choose for the making of sports socks.
8. The name for this fibre was chosen to by combining the names of New York and London in order to make sure it is a unique name.
9. This part of the garment carried the status bars of nurses, military men and women and cadets.
15. To have a suit that will not crease easier and is durable this fabric will be chosen as it brings the good qualities of two fabrics together.
16. Fabric that will be decomposed by micro-organisms over time.
17. The traditional garment worn by mostly Indian women.
19. The beautiful, colourful fabric used in African dress and shirt designs.

20. The regenerated fabric that are classified as the greenest one because all chemicals used in the process of changing the fibres will be recycled.

21. Silk is the only natural fibre that presents in this way.

22. In order to keep ones clothes in a good condition we often refer to the idiom: A something in time saves nine.

23. This is a fibre made from plant fibres that are broken down through chemical processes.

24. A vegetable fibre made from the fibres of the flax plant.

Down

1. The ability of a fabric to last long even under strenuous conditions.
2. The head covering worn by Jewish men when they are doing religious studies or praying.
3. durable vegetable fibre that can withstand high temperatures, be tumble-dried and ironed on a hot setting.

6. Wool burns slowly and without a flame, what is this called?

7. The ability of a fibre to spring back to its original shape and bulk after being compressed.

10. The forming of tiny balls on the surfaces of knitted fabrics where there are friction, like under the arms.

11. description of a fabric that will give off or create substances dangerous to people or the environment.

12. This type of fabric will carry the seal of approval of vegans.

13. This quality of clothing is often seen in a negative way, while not revealing too much of the body can add a positive to the way a person is perceived at first impression.

14. The ability of a fibre or fabric to stretch and then return to its original shape and size.

18. This reason for the use of clothing will be tops when it has to do with evening wear, durability and pilling will be low on the list.