

Memory-How does your memory work? part 3

Across

5. variables that could affect the results of a study

10. the theory of explaining something according to its basic constituent parts

11. where the procedure of a study is the same across all conditions

12. the tendency to recall words at the beginning of a list when asked to remember it

13. a technique where participants retell something to another participant to form a chain; this is how folk stories are passed down through cultures.

14. the sensory register for visual information

15. not linked to a specific type of sensory information

16. mathematical calculations performed on data to see whether the findings could be due to chance

Down

1. the practice of reductionism

2. a technique where participants are asked to recall something again and again

3. the theory of explaining something as a whole

4. when the outcomes of a study are consistent

6. the sensory register for auditory (sound) information

7. the tendency to recall words at the end of a list when asked to remember it

8. a realistic everyday task

9. the practice of holism