

Nonfiction Text Features

Across

2. helps the reader understand exactly what something looks like
4. a list of facts or numbers arranged in rows and columns
6. visual representations showing how 2 or more variables are related to each other
8. an alphabetical list of terms and definitions usually found at the back of the book
9. a drawing intended to explain how something works
11. text that is heavier and darker than the rest of the text
13. pages at the back of the book that tell where to find important topics in the book
14. Words that are slanted to the right. It calls attention to important words or terms.
15. visual representations of data
16. the name of a book or article

Down

1. a list of chapters and their page numbers
3. a secondary heading added underneath a subject heading

5. they help to understand where places are located
7. a visual representation of events in history displayed in chronological order
10. words close to photographs, illustrations, or charts, explaining what they are
12. a line of text serving to indicate what the passage below it is about

