

Psychology Intro Unit Crossword

Across

4. _____ Piaget was a Swiss developmental psychologist that developed the four stages of cognitive development

9. Self _____ is a person's motivation to reach his or her full potential

10. Researchers must be careful and not let preconceived ideas influence their research

14. This type of reinforcement strengthens behavior by providing a rewarding response to completing an act or certain behaviour

16. Punishment that happens when a certain reinforcing stimulus is removed after a particular undesired behaviour is exhibited, resulting in the behaviour happening less often in the future

18. _____ observation is a method adopted to research cult members by engaging and intervening with the group that's being observed

19. Sample size, blind experimenters, and experimental and control groups are examples of some of the techniques used to increase the _____ of research

20. Consent ensuring that participants understand what is expected of them for the research and have given permission to continue

Down

1. The right of privacy for subjects participating in a study

2. In the humanistic perspective, this level includes security of body, employment, resources, mortality, family, health, and property

3. Experiments where the researcher has full control over situation and people involved in experiment don't know they're being studied

5. The ecological perspective is also called the _____ perspective

6. The form of research that leaves no trace of interference of disturbance in natural settings is called _____ observation

7. Collects large amount of information in short amount of time, however it's impersonal and limits range of response

8. The study of the mind as an information processor is called _____ psychology

11. Erik _____ was a developmental psychologist that claimed humans develop in stages

12. Research participants are given full information on the study they have participated in

13. The _____ perspective describes the circumstances that individuals are placed in, and how their behaviors are affected specifically by their surrounding, social, and cultural factors

15. Face to face meeting where questions to be asked are prepared ahead of time, and a wider range of responses are often collected

17. This type of research is the balance between what is necessary for research and what is fair treatment for animals