

Research Terminology

Across

3. This type of variables includes age, gender, ethnicity, income, education, etc.
6. This aspect of the research determines if the researcher has time, money, or skills to conduct the research study.
7. This variable is the behavior, characteristic, or outcome the researcher is interested in investigating.
10. This type of research is associated with the collection and analysis of numeric information.

11. This type of hypothesis indicates there is no relationship between variables.

12. When the independent variable is the cause of the dependent variable, the relationship is what?

13. This variable is the presumed cause of or influence on the dependent variable.

Down

1. The people who provide information to the researchers in a study comprise the study _____.

2. This type of hypothesis predicts the existence of relationships, not their direction.

4. This hypothesis predicts the direction of the relationship.

5. This states the predicted relationships between two or more variables.

8. The information collected during the course of the research study.

9. This type of research is associated with understanding the human experience.