

Name: _____

Testing and Intelligence

Across

6. tendency to judge the probability of an event by how easy it is to think of examples or instances of it

8. tendency to try and solve new problems with successful strategies from the past

9. conclusion necessarily follows from a set of premises

10. purposeful mental activity that involves operating on information in order to reach conclusions

Down

1. tendency to consult emotions instead of judging probabilities objectively

2. conclusion probably follows from a set of premises

3. comparing and evaluating opposing points of view in order to resolve differences (pros/cons)

4. people resolving conflicts in predictable, though not always obvious, ways

5. paying attention only to evidence that confirms one's belief and finding fault with evidence of a different perspective

7. tendency to overestimates one's ability to have predicted an event once the outcome is known