

The Study of Population

Across

2. Used to determine the number of people in a certain area
 7. Highly concentrated area that includes Germany, France, England, etc.
 13. Type of map in which only population is shown
 14. ighly concentrated area that includes Indonesia
 16. Number of births compared to every 1000 people in a population during a one year span
 19. Sparsely populated because of steep mountains
 20. Total number of people in a certain land area
 21. The number of babies born compared to the number that die

22. You use CBR and CDR to determine this percentage

Down

1. Number of deaths compared to every 1000 people in a population during a one year span
 3. During a woman's childbearing years she's expected to have a certain number of babies based off of others
 4. To explain economic differences between countries by counting the number of farmers per area of arable land
 5. A way of expressing how the people of an area are in a relationship regarding resources with the land around them
 6. An area with such an extreme temperature that humans cannot survive off of the resources provided
 8. Amount of time in which a baby when born is thought to live
 9. Highly concentrated area that includes China, Japan, the Korean Peninsula, etc.
 10. To count the number of members living inside of a 24 sq. mile land area
 11. When someone takes age, gender, health, etc. into account while observing a population (study of...)
 12. Highly concentrated area that includes India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, etc.
 15. A population will go from 100 to 200 in 6 months
 17. Area that isn't suitable for agriculture due to high levels of precipitation
 18. Sparsely populated due to little water and resources