

France

Across

- 5. Potatoes cut into strips and deep-fried.
- 8. A round flattish cap of felt or cloth.
- 10. An annual multiple stage bicycle race primarily held in France, while also occasionally making passes through nearby countries.
- 11. A famous landmark in Paris that was constructed 1887-9 for the World's Fair.
- 15. A French queen who ruled from 1774 until 1792.
- 16. A snail, especially as an item on a menu.
- 17. A food made from the pressed curds of milk, there are about 400 different varieties of this food that were invented in France.
- 18. A name for the underwater train from the UK to France.
- 20. The French form of currency.
- 21. Yes!

- 22. a small round cake with a meringue-like consistency, made with egg whites, sugar, and powdered almonds and consisting of two halves sandwiching a creamy filling.
- 24. The full name of a French fashion designer who created the high end brand Givenchy.
- 25. This object has the colors red, white, and blue and is representative of France.

Down

- 1. The author of The Three Musketeers and The Count of Monte Cristo.
- 2. Originally created by Walt Disney in California in 1955 but came to Paris France in 1992.
- 3. A buttery, flaky, viennoiserie pastry named for its crescent shape.
- 4. A vegetable dish consisting of onions, zucchini, tomatoes, eggplant, and peppers, fried and stewed in oil and sometimes served cold. It is also the name of a Disney movie about a rat named Remy.

- 6. A famous museum located in Paris.
- 7. A light, spongy baked dish made typically by adding flavored egg yolks to stiffly beaten egg whites, it is mentioned in the movie Beauty and the Beast.
- 9. A book written by Antoine de Saint-Exupéry in 1943, that has been made into 2 movies.
- 12. Hello!
- 13. A long, narrow loaf of French bread.
- 14. The full name of a French fashion designer who created the high end brand Chanel.
- 19. A type of French dog with curly that can sometimes have a quite interesting haircut.
- 23. The author of the famous books/musicals, Les Miserables and The Hunchback of Notre-Dame.